WE REMEMBER JIM FIENE

Historic preservationist and gentleman Jim Fiene passed away on June 19, 2020. He grew up in Green Bay, and he and Roberta began their life together when they met as sophomores at West High School. He graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy, married and moved to Norfolk, Virginia and served aboard the U.S.S. Holder for four years.

The Fienes moved to Racine in 1963 when Jim left the Navy. His entire career was spent at S.C. Johnson & Son. One of the highlights of his work there was accompanying the Johnson family on their 1998 re-created flight to Fortaleza, Brazil commemorating H. F. Johnson, Jr.'s journey there to study the Carnauba palm in 1935.

No tribute to Jim can ignore the fact that he and Roberta worked in tandem as they advocated and supported the work of Preservation Racine and several other like organizations. They always lived in the Southside Historic District, first on Wisconsin Avenue and then in the 1881 Lee House on South Main Street.

They treasured the big yellow Queen Anne style house and filled it with their collection of Victorian furniture and Racine ephemera. And their daughters Pauline and Elizabeth grew up there.

As the nation celebrated its bicentennial in 1976 and the historic preservation movement in Racine gained momentum, Jim and Roberta were drawn into Preservation Racine's first project, the Blake House at 936 South Main Street. The house remained important to them, and they both served on its management board over the years. Jim quickly became the guy to call when a pipe broke or the furnace quit in the middle of a cold Wisconsin winter. We owe him a debt of gratitude as we enjoy the fine condition of our 152-year old landmark.

Active in the Racine County Historical Society in the 1970s, the Fienes were instrumental in the melding of that early organization with the Racine County Historical Museum. From 1981 to 1987, Jim served on its board and he served as chair in 1983-1984. In the early 1980s, he also served on the Racine Urban Aesthetics Association, and, when the city asked Jim to serve on the Racine Landmarks Preservation Commission in 1982, he accepted that invitation and remained a member until 2000. Jim also served a three-year term on the Racine Cemetery Commission.

Jim and Roberta guided Preservation Racine as co-presidents through the years 1992-1994, and they opened their home for the 1992 Tour of Historic Places.

When we remember Jim, the picture in our mind's eye is a lanky, sandy-haired fellow with a handle bar mustache perched on a high wheel bicycle pedaling in Racine's Independence Day parades. He was also a father and grandfather who wrote poems to celebrate his children's and grandchildren's birthdays. And he embroidered a mean Christmas stocking! Curious and creative, with a keen mind and an appetite for life's challenges, Jim will be missed. We are fortunate that he was our fellow historic preservationist and friend.

Newly Elected

Nominating Committee chair Vic Schubert has confirmed that the ballot as presented was overwhelmingly approved by our membership as of August 1. The following have been elected for a two-year term:

President – Pippin Michelli
Vice-president – Mark Sommer
Historian – Sharon Baldukas
Director-at-large – Teri Lillich

Members of Preservation Racine thank the newly elected for agreeing to serve and wish them great success. We can help them achieve their goals by actively supporting and becoming involved in our organization.

With Appreciation …

As the Board of Preservation Racine changes, we are grateful for Steven Rogstad who served as an outstanding President twice, offering great leadership and direction and for Heather Egan, our outgoing Program Chairman, for all of her efforts to bring us fascinating and informative programs.

November 2019 Paul Zens, our Blake House chairman, lost his beloved wife, Mary. She served as Preservation Racine's hospitality chairman in the past with warmth and cordiality. Our friend, Jerry Karwowski, who is a treasured friend to Preservation Racine, lost his wife, Marie, in January 2020. Our sincere condolences to both families.

As with so many organizations on a local, state or national level everything has changed since COVID 19 has come into our lives. Preservation Racine had announced the nominees for April's elections at our March membership meeting, but that meeting was canceled along with the membership meetings planned for the rest of 2020. The Century Building celebration planned for May in honor of National Preservation Month has been moved to May of 2021. Our tour of Historic Places has been postponed until the last Sunday in September 2021. We missed the publication of the spring Preservation Racine Newsletter. In spite of these road blocks, many of you have continued your financial support by renewing your membership. As with many non-profit organizations, our expenses are ongoing. Thank you for your continued support, we need you. If you have not renewed your membership this year, money sent now would renew your membership to Preservation Racine through the balance of this year and all of 2021.

Blake House Update

The Blake House at 936 Main Street in Racine is an Italianate Villa style house which was built in 1868 for George and Roxilana Bull, owners of a downtown dry goods store. A few years later an important local industrialist and politician, Lucius Blake, purchased the house, which remained in his family until the 1920s, when it became first a boarding house and then five apartments. In the mid-1970s, Preservation Racine and several other nonprofit organizations collaborated with financial support and "elbow grease" to save the house from demolition. Many hours of volunteer and professional work have been necessary over the years to restore and maintain this historic building which now belongs to Preservation Racine.

The back porch had already been replaced in the late 1970s, and a nonoriginal front porch was also removed but not replaced until 2016, using an old photo and professional guidance to try to replicate its original features. As described in the previous issue of this newsletter along with a more extensive history of the Blake House, the aging 1970s back porch had recently needed extensive repairs, which Vortex Construction began last fall and completed this spring.

(Correction: The last newsletter erroneously stated that Vortex Construction had also replaced the front porch; actually, Distinctive Woodwork had done that major project, restoring and completing the impressive public face of our building. We apologize for the reporting error.)

With the exterior once again in good condition, the need arose for some interior repairs. As a result of many years of wear by hands and feet, parts of the staircase had become unstable, including some stair treads as well as its railing and balusters ("spindles"), especially the second-floor balustrade, so carpentry repairs were made to ensure structural integrity and personal safety.

The gasolier in the downstairs north apartment (Preservation Racine's office). Its damaged medallion was restored by Jim Fiene in the summer of 2019. Photo: Janet Carter

In addition, ceiling plaster damage in the front entryway was traced to a slow water leak in the supply lines to the sink in an upstairs bathroom, along with a longstanding but previously undiscovered plumbing anomaly in the wastewater stack. That apartment's bathroom fixtures had to be removed, the flooring taken up, and repairs made; then the room was re-floored and the bathroom fixtures were finally returned to their places, now without leaks. The seeping moisture had even caused the first-floor entryway ceiling to sag, requiring repair and replacement, and a ceiling light fixture connection was also repaired. All of this work is hardly noticeable, but the total cost this year for the interior repairs amounts to well over $10,000 — a necessary investment to maintain the building's infrastructure and avert more serious problems.

Preservation Racine uses one side of the Blake House's first floor for our office and archives, and we rent out an office space on the other side along with the three upstairs apartments. In spite of the climate supposedly being "cooler near the lake," this summer's prolonged hot weather has necessitated the installation of air conditioners in the apartments. Several AC units, including two that were donated by some generous Preservation Racine members, were installed with the reasonably priced assistance of several helpful church handymen from next door. Now our tenants will no longer have to suffer in the sweltering heat and humidity!

The monthly rental income is adequate to support the maintenance of the building, except for emergencies and some major projects. The downstairs office space is currently vacant and available for long-term rental, possibly for a realtor, attorney, or other small business. Interested parties should contact our realty manager, Anna Maria DeRango, at (262) 989-6520.

Thanks again to the Blake House Committee volunteers and all the knowledgeable and hard-working experts and contractors, past and present, who continue to help us preserve this historic building!

Programs to Remember

The program year started with a "Bang" for Preservation Racine. In January, the Program Committee had all programs set for the year 2020 … and it was exciting.

The first meeting in February was headlined by Tim Mutterer at the Masonic Center. He drew everyone in with unknown tales of U.S. presidents.

Preservation Racine was invited to have its March meeting at the new Racine Case IH Experience Center, a 20,000 square foot showroom, tour center and audiovisual room at the Case Headquarters. Visitors can learn and view the history and the future of Case IH. Preservation members and friends enjoyed learning and viewing the technological advances of Case IH along with taking pictures and selfies of the heritage pieces and the new Case IH Magnum Series tractor. Also, a little shopping at the Case IH fan shop for exclusive Case items … clothing, books and accessories … was intriguing to members.

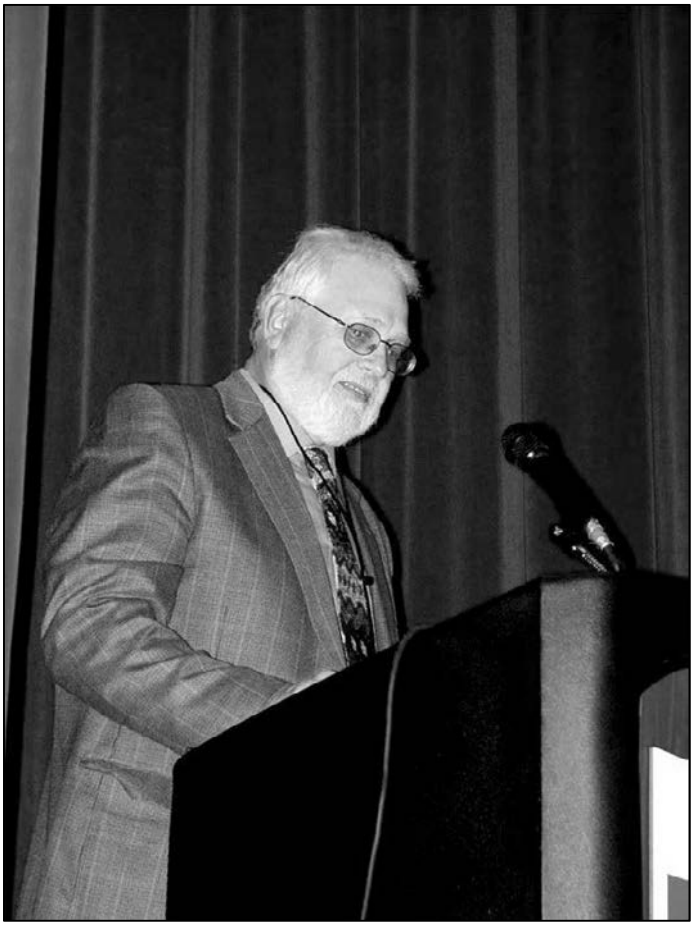
Case IH provided the coffee for our event. Members Mary Ann McGinn and Diane Steiner served delicious treats.



Gerald Karwowski gave a memorable presentation at the Racine Case IH Experience Center

After coffee, the membership met in the adjoining Experience Center conference and audiovisual room. The room was filled beyond capacity … over 100 attendees …to hear and view the popular presentation by our special friend and Preservation Racine member, Gerald Karwowski, as he reviewed the History of the J. I. Case Company.

Jerry retired after a 30-year career at Case. His acclaimed presentation tells the story of the company from its beginnings to the present time … spotlighted with slides from those beginnings to Jerry's own days of employment. The history became personal when people in the audience recognized and pointed out their husband, their father, their neighbor, and interjected anecdotes of the histories they have lived, and stories passed down through the years.

To Jerry's credit, he was able to adapt his presentation to the fascinating additions from his audience … as only an experienced and connected speaker can do.

Jerry has a memorable history himself … he has written numerous booklets and articles about Racine's past, entertained hundreds of groups with his presentations on Racine history, and been featured on the American Pickers TV program. He has gathered one of the largest local history collections in Racine County at his Oak Clearings Farm and Museum in Union Grove.

So … it was an evening to remember … such a great venue, a large crowd, a wonderful speaker. Little did we know it would be the last meeting of 2020 … when there were highly anticipated programs to come.

But there is good news!

All the speakers and programs have promised to return in 2021. Carol Gianforte and Jim Mercier will return with their program about Racine Theatres; Pete Sisak has his program about the history of Zahn's and the Zahn family all ready to present; Pippin Michelli is waiting with her program about Racine's most prolific architect; Rochelle Pennington will travel here once again with one of her always-popular programs; and of course there will be a Century Building Awards celebration.

So … Stay Alert! Stay Tuned! Stay Well! There are excellent Preservation Racine, Inc. programs in your future.

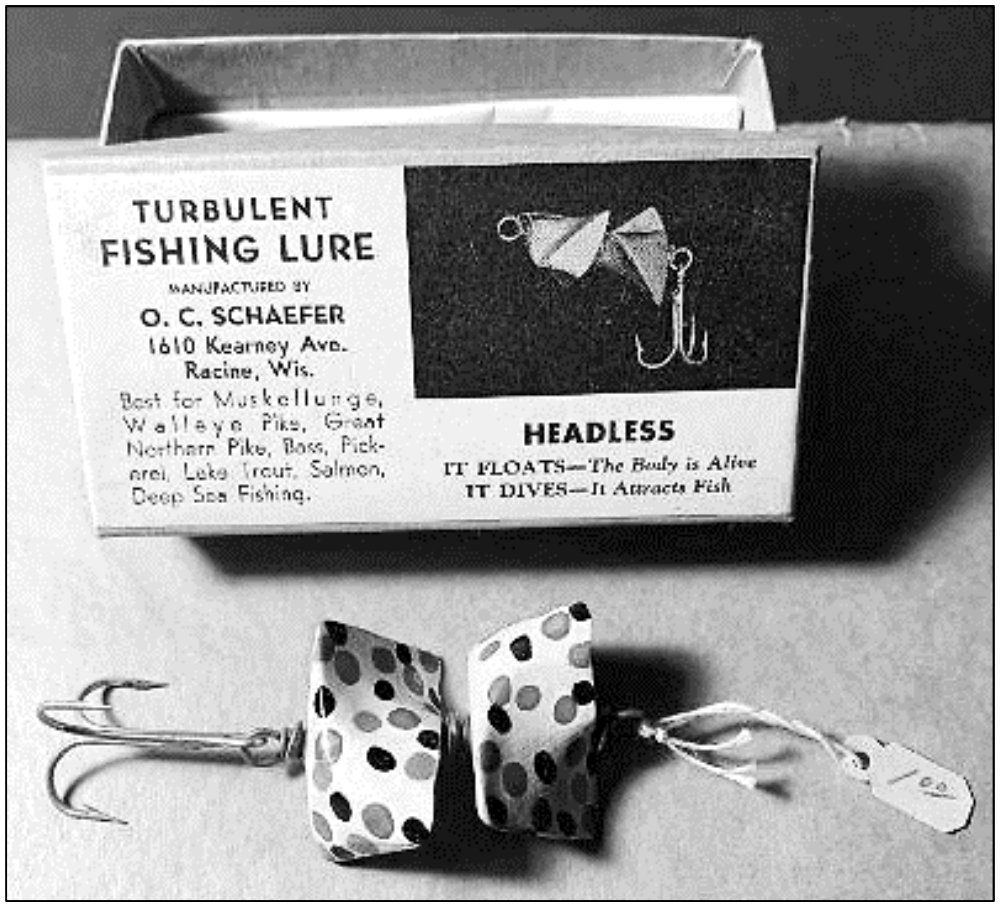
Made in Racine – Fishing Lures

Are you new to the Racine area? Or maybe now that summer is finally here, we can get around to some warm-weather activities that we've been looking forward to since last fall. That would include golfing, camping, baseball games, hiking, fishing, festivals, and many other fun outdoor activities. But did you know that the fishing industry had a connection to Racine at one time? That connection would be fishing lures, and it may surprise you to learn that the company involved in their manufacture was not located in a large factory, but was pretty much a one-man operation! That man was one Oscar C. Schaefer, and his "factory" was located at 1610 Kearney Avenue ... his residence! So, let's read all about how a fishing lure helped to put the "Made in Racine, Wisconsin" label on yet another local product.



To be sure, fishing lures were not the only fishing-related products made here in the Belle City. Nylon power lines, fish scalers, bobbers, and even a "Bob-Er-Lite" (a large transparent "ball-shaped" plastic bobber with a battery-operated light inside for night fishing) were a few other products made to assist fishermen. However, it was the "Turbulent Lure", made by Oscar Schaefer, that almost guaranteed that muskies, walleye pike, bass, lake trout, salmon, even deep-sea fish could easily be caught!

Schaefer was a mechanical engineer by trade, but he was also a sportsman. An avid fisherman, he knew a great deal about the habits of fish, and how to catch them. For example, he noticed that when fish were quietly floating near the surface of the water, they paid little or no attention to the most expensive and attractive lures currently on the market. He states in one of his brochures that "there is a reason why muskies do not strike as often as they should. The lures on the market are too quiet and silent, and are unnoticed by the fighting fish." On a fishing trip to Lake-of-the-Woods in Ontario once, Schaefer, along with five other fishermen, had no luck trying to catch muskies or northern pike. It then occurred to him to fasten four of their noisiest lures together, making a plug that was about eighteen inches long. I'll let Schaefer describe what happened next: "When I cast this terrifying mess of turbulent water-disturbing hooks and spinners into the water, I had a strike almost instantly of a twenty-pound northern, and soon after, another big fish." An idea was born!

He went on to say that "This experience set me to thinking, and I concluded that most of our lures are painfully quiet when in the water, and do not create enough turbulence. Therefore, I decided that a new type of lure was needed, something that would cause muskies to attack fiercely. Muskies will fight instantly and viciously if they are teased and antagonized by the proper type of lively, noisy lures." He soon developed a line of TURBULANT

FISHING LURES, which he began making at his residence on Racine's southside. His lures were all hand-carved and hand-painted by Schaefer himself in his own workshop. The lures themselves consisted of two or three sections which "rotated" on a central shaft, while spinning in different directions. They were considered to be very unique and innovative, as well as being quite attractive!

Schaefer began his business around 1945, and as far as I can determine, ceased making lures in the very early '50s. He was born in 1888 and passed away in 1979 at the ripe old age of 91. I'm assuming that he left Racine after "retiring" from making lures (maybe moving "up north" to do a little fishing?), since his name does not appear in any future city directories or phone books. I've arrived at the conclusion that his lure-making venture was nothing more than a profitable hobby, since he was employed at Young Radiator and then J I Case while making his lures. His TURBULENT lures were sold throughout North America, but not in stores! Besides making the lures by hand, packaging and pricing them, he even did his own marketing. He advertised heavily in fishing, sporting and other trade magazines in order to get the word out about his "state of the art" lures.

He produced seven different types of lures for the avid fisherman. The first one was called the "Turbulent Diving Lure," which actually floats on the surface, and then can "dive" up to eight feet of water when being reeled in. It was advertised as "wriggling from side to side as it dives and its body is alive with spinners." A variation of this model was designed for deep diving in dark waters or for night fishing. A luminous substance that served as a light source was actually a radioactive compound (gasp!) that lasted for years, while giving off a white light.

The "Turbulent Surface Lure" was designed to create a turbulence on the surface of the water and claimed to be very attractive to fish when they were near the surface. Another lure, called the Turbulent Headless Surface Lure," was much smaller than the first two (having only one hook) and was designed for catching bass. The "Turbulent Penetrator Lure" was meant for deep waters and also for ice fishing. The "Turbulent Excitor Lure" was a bit smaller, and claimed to "irritate the fish when casting or trolling," while the "Turbulent Tiger Lure" promised to "claw and fight its way downward ... has an all-spinner body." Finally, the "Turbulent Wet Fly Lure" was a smaller lure, meant for bass and trout fishing. All seven models came with fifteen different color variations, as well as very attractive spotted finishes. Prices were only $1.69 for his top-of-the-line lures, while others could be purchased for only a buck.

In one of his brochures, Schaefer states that "Every fisherman should have a complete set of TURBULENT FISHING LURES for his tackle box, which are attractively presented in fifteen colors so that he may choose the colors he favors most." I wish I did as well, considering that a Schaefer lure in mint-condition can sell for hundreds of dollars!

Now, get out there and enjoy some summer activities!

DUES – What do you get for them?

Admittedly, in 2020 not very much!

Programs at interesting locations throughout the county full of local history and information.

NOPE

Century Buildings Awards honoring buildings throughout Racine County since 1988.

CANCELLED

Tour of Historic Places our most popular event and main source of income. We have put on 43 tours which involved hundreds of houses, churches, government or commercial buildings; thousands of volunteers; and research hours too numerous to count.

POSTPONED

Newsletters full of current information and history of buildings and people in Racine County. Up against the hardship of not being able to access our best research sources from the Area Archives at UW-Parkside, Racine County Register of Deeds, Racine City Hall, Racine Public Library and Racine Heritage Museum, the newsletter returns after only missing the Summer edition dedicated to the Century Buildings Awards.

WE'RE BACK!

Preservation Blake House is a huge source of pride and accomplishment for Preservation Racine members having saved and repaired the building and securing its future. It was designated a local landmark under Racine's Landmark Preservation Ordinance. In addition, we have offered encouragement, moral and political support to save College Avenue's historic brick paved blocks; and compiled extensive research on Camp Utley for a commemorative marker.

WE GOT THIS!

As we hobble through 2020, unable to provide our very best, there is still plenty to appreciate and be proud of. Continuing the newsletter and maintaining Blake House both require funds, particularly Blake House as you will read about in this edition of the newsletter. So far about 80% of the members have renewed their membership and paid their dues.

THANK YOU for your continued support, we need you! Money sent now will renew your membership through the balance of this year and all of 2021. The membership renewal form is still on the back page.

Thank you for your past, current and future support of Preservation Racine

Ex-President's Letter

I write this column as your ex-president. This organization was scheduled to vote on a new slate of officers this past April, but the current health crisis has prevented the membership from meeting to cast votes. Therefore, a mail-vote was conducted in July. I am happy to report that 122 ballots were cast and the slate of proposed officers and board members were unanimously elected to office. They were installed on August 16.

It would be a gross understatement to say that the current health crisis has curtailed activities or challenged organizations to conduct business in novel and unfamiliar ways. This is especially true for nonprofits nationwide, who rely heavily on membership support and recruitment, fundraising campaigns and activities, and familiar events which maintain and enhance a group's visibility. The standard ways of performing regular activities have been suspended by most nonprofits since March of this year. In fact, most museums are still not open to the public, and numerous historical societies, agencies, and preservation groups have suspended virtually all activities indefinitely.

We have witnessed this change in process within Preservation Racine with the cancellation this year of our Century Buildings celebration this past May, plus the cancellation of the Annual Tour of Historic Places, which would have taken place next month. The monthly membership meetings have been suspended since last February, and the board has not met since that month, either. Collectively, it has been a lousy year for nonprofit organizations, and there is no sign on the immediate horizon that it will dramatically change anytime soon.

The conditions associated with the current health crisis, however – social distancing, stay-at-home directives, and limitations on public gatherings – have compelled groups to think more creatively about ways in which they can become relevant in this new world of virtual business, activity, and communication. Nonprofits are now forced to "think anew and act anew" (quoting Abraham Lincoln). More thought is being given to virtual events, virtual communications, virtual meetings, and virtual fundraising. This will necessitate adopting new technologies and techniques, including social media, video, audio, and enhanced email access to members. Greater attention is now being given to how to make activities electronic, rather than in-person events. The familiar methods of operation need to be re-examined and adjusted to fit these new times and circumstances.

It has been my privilege to serve as President for this important preservation organization for the past two years, although I have been a previous president, vice-president, and board member going back to 2007. It is now time to step aside and allow some new creative minds to take Preservation Racine to the next level. My decision to depart is also based upon the fact that I have become increasingly busy over the last six months, as my work as Director of Development for the Sheboygan County Historical Research Center continues to expand. Also, I am excited to announce that my new book*, Among the Badgers: Rediscovering Sites Associated with Abraham and Mary Lincoln in Wisconsin,* will be published around mid-September. The book will be nearly 400 pages and is a combination of history, travel, and coffee table book. So, I am already busy with marketing and promotion for the book. I have already started a second book, and have three or four more I want to write. I find there is not enough time in the day to do everything I want.

What I want at this time is for you to continue to support Preservation Racine through your membership, financial support, and attendance at events – whether they are in-person or virtual. Your continued interest in local preservation issues will keep Preservation Racine relevant in all the days ahead.

Steven K. Rogstad

From the President

I am so pleased to be able to write to you all at last! What a difficult year we've had with canceled meetings, canceled programs, canceled Newsletter, and not even the ability to vote in the new board! It may have seemed as if Preservation Racine was disappearing, but the committees and existing board continued to do what we could remotely, and we are still here and still functional.

When it became clear that the lockdown would be with us for a while, we decided (in accordance with the by-laws) to hold the board election by mail, and I am pleased to tell you that we have added Teri Lillich to the board as an At-Large member, and that Sharon Baldukas has been re-elected as Historian and Mark Sommer as Vice President. Existing board member Debbie Yale has taken up the position of Secretary, and Pippin Michelli has been elected as new President. Thank you all for voting, and on my own behalf, thank you for your confidence in me – I will do all I can to live up to it!

The first thing I want to do is to thank outgoing President Steven Rogstad with all my heart for everything he has done for us. Much of this was behind the scenes, but in the public sphere he has helped us address some needs that were becoming urgent. Not the least of these is fund raising. It was Steve who organized one of the first special fund-raising events we held (if not the first), "The Big Three + 1": a meeting of three much-loved local historian-collectors, Jim Mercier, John Van Thiel, and Jerry Karwowski, with Steve himself as moderator for their discussions. It made a wonderful evening, held at "The Covenant" in the newly refurbished Murray Mansion, and I hope we will hold more of that kind of event when the lockdown finally ends! Mark Sommer, Michele Caskey, and Sybil Knop comprise the current fund-raising committee, and we look forward to their proposals.

One reason that fund raising has become more urgent is that we have had to spend a great deal on the Blake House, our headquarters and example to other restorers. Some of the needed projects included the repair and restoration of the back porch, and of the ceiling in the north ground-floor apartment (our board room); and some serious water-damage repairs. Since we have had few ways to generate income this year, it is important to replenish the funds as soon as possible.

It does seem that we will not have program meetings for the foreseeable future but we anticipate bringing out this Newsletter as usual. Board meetings are being moved to "Zoom" so that we can start progressing matters again, and we have plenty to discuss as a board. Until those meetings are in place, I cannot itemize possible activities or projects to compensate for the lost membership program meetings, but I will say that my personal hope is to expand what we can do online by creating and subscribing to resources and even, perhaps, introducing some virtual education. Without a Landmarks Commission, we need watch-dog news which can be kept up to date online and in this Newsletter. And if we cannot have real events, we might perhaps think about preparing some extra publications, either printed or digital. I would love to know people's ideas of any kind, and to find out how we can all support each other to make them happen. We all do need to volunteer for things, but so much can now be done without even leaving our homes that perhaps more of us could be involved productively? Wouldn't it build our community to create collaborative projects of one kind or another? Yet, none of this is set in stone – it is just my musings! The most important thing is for us all to be glad and proud to be members of Preservation Racine, and to do – or not do – whatever makes us comfortable. Let's have fun while preserving Racine County!

Warmest regards,
Pippin Michelli, michelli@plinia.net
President

An Exciting Possibility

Spoiler alert – this has not yet come to fruition but it has got into the proposal stage and is looking very hopeful!

Members may not know that I am a university professor, and my field is art and architectural history from the caves to yesterday. And I am looking at Racine's lovely, and fragile, buildings and seeking for ways to buy them just a bit more time.

So, I approached UW-Parkside to propose a community-based-learning course, in which we could teach the students to research using unpublished sources, to compile, sort and track information, and help to pioneer new fields. In the process they would be helping us to research Racine County's buildings.

Here's the idea: we – that is we the membership – buddy up with one student each and make a team to research a building and its stories as we do for Century Buildings and for the Tour. The students take on a leadership role in the community by attending the City Council meetings, learning how they work, and preparing a three-minute elevator speech to give in the public speaking time. As members, we would talk to the students about the things we find important, or difficult, or lovely, and as the students learn, so do we. Perhaps they may give short presentations for the program at some stage, or perhaps write to the press in support of preservation efforts.

So have a think. Might you be willing to buddy up with a student for one semester? Mostly it would be by email, but if physical classes are happening again, you might want to come along to a couple. And if so, which building(s) might you want to see researched?

I'm so excited that Parkside was receptive to this idea! It is not by any means a done deal, but it is going down well that we would be such a good community network for the course. That is rare!

Let us know your thoughts.

Pippin Michelli

Century Building Plaques

Although Preservation Racine was forced to cancel our Century Buildings Award celebration this spring, the many years of the well-maintained and rejuvenated structures are still on my mind. That is due to the Century Building Plaque project, which provides an opportunity for owners to purchase a permanent commemoration and public acknowledgment of the honor. Mailings have been sent to current owners of the honored buildings from 1996 through 2019. Now that our supplier is once again manufacturing plaques, after being shuttered by the COVID-19 pandemic, I am ready to contact the 1988 through 1995 owners.

The plaque sales project is a fundraiser for Preservation Racine. We have sold over thirty plaques for $200. The project helps the organization bring in additional income while providing owners public acknowledgement of their well-preserved building with an ornament of lasting beauty.

If you missed ordering a plaque or lost your order form, call or email me and I'll take your order.
